

LEGEND OF THE "TAYLOR" MILLIONS

Rumour has it that an uncle or great uncle of my father (John Walter Shields Taylor) went to Holland and made a fortune in the bulb growing business. He died without heirs and a considerable fortune is still held in Holland by the Dutch government. I didn't put too much credence in this but some years ago saw an article in (I think) the Evening Standard in which all this was mentioned. They stated that no-one had been able to prove their claim and also stated that it was believed the branch of the Taylor family involved was living in Woolwich. These people I believe to be relatives of my father who came to London before he died. I thought this might add to the interest of any research you may do.
